

Tetanus Vaccine Linked to Infertility

Dr. Carrie Madej

Carrie Madej

On March 14th during my daily walk through the neighborhood, I approached two dogs behind a gate that seemed to be friendly. One let me pet it, and when I did, suddenly the other dog bit me! I posted the picture of my wound on social media and soon an acquaintance from my old Chicago neighborhood with whom I went elementary school whose career is a registered nurse urged me to get vaccinated for tetanus. I had no initial intention to go to a doctor for this, and I sure didn't listen to her about the need to be vaccinated for Covid, but because I did a search for tetanus on the Internet which told me it's an incurable disease, I took her advice, went to the doctor, and got the shot and my arm got sore for a while. Today I got a video from a friend that says the narrative about tetanus may be fear-mongering to get people to take an infertility drug!

Dr. Carrie Madej is originally from Dearborn, Michigan and received her medical degree from Kansas City University of Medical Biosciences in 2001. She then completed her traditional internship at the The Medical Center in Columbus, Georgia and internal medicine residency at Mercer University in Macon Georgia.

Transcription

Dr. Carrie Madej: Well, I've always been somebody that questions everything. And it really started when I was a teenager. I asked, "why do we have to take the tetanus vaccine every ten years?" And just to shorten this for time's sake, is that I ended up finding out, asking all of my attending physicians, and infectious disease experts. We found out that the reason that they told us back then to take it was that when you are walking out in the yard, you have a rusty nail on your foot, the bacteria called tetanus gets in there, and then within minutes to hours, not days or weeks, you could spasm so terribly that you would suffocate to death, fall on the floor and die, like, within minutes to hours, which I've never heard of anyone dying that way. So I came to find out, that is a lie. No one has died that way. Nobody in the entire world in the history (Interviewer: "I heard that.") written history, right? Yeah.

So why are they giving it out if that's a lie? Right? So I was doing an observation on my rotations in Detroit, Michigan, when I was training, and I saw that they gave some people the vaccine for tetanus and some not as a protocol. And the ones that were on welfare did not get it, but the ones with private pay did, which didn't make sense. But I saw there's a huge difference in fertility. Huge. The people who didn't get it were extremely fertile. The people who did had a lot of problems.

I Googled it then, and sure enough, you can still find this, if you Google it, that the World Health Organization and NIH have since 1972, been developing the tetanus vaccine as an abortion or sterilization vaccine. They've been putting the pregnancy hormone inside the tetanus vaccine in that vial. And so every time you get it, it's a cumulative response. Your body will then see if you're female. You'll see, when you're getting pregnant, you have a higher and higher HCG level, right? Well, then your body will then learn to attack that. So it's going to attack an early pregnancy. So then you wouldn't even know you got pregnant in the first place.

So they have absolutely used it in Latino countries, Africa and India. I absolutely believe they were using it here in the US, although they deny it. Although you look on the World Health Organization websites, oh, they've had tons of vaccines they've been developing, they've been testing out, they've been utilizing on us for decades and lying to the doctors, lying to the other people. So my point is, these are the organizations standing behind the COVID shot right now.